INTRODUCTION

GUIDELINES FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF CONNECTICUT GENERAL
STATUTE SEC. 17a-101q
*A Statewide K-12 Sexual Assault & Abuse Prevention & Awareness Program

This document offers guidance to assist local education agencies in response to Connecticut General Statute Sec. 17a-101q A Statewide Sexual Abuse and Assault Awareness Program. This statute directs the Department of Children and Families (DCF) in collaboration with the Connecticut State Department of Education (SDE) and Connecticut Alliance to End Sexual Violence (The Alliance - formerly CONNSACS) to develop a statewide sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness program to be implemented in all local and regional school districts in Connecticut by October 1, 2016 (see Appendix A for the statutory language). To assist schools in meeting these requirements, this document will provide an overview of sexual violence, recommendations for: delivering effective professional development, identifying developmentally- and age-appropriate awareness and prevention educational materials for students, policy guidance and suggested resources.

The document includes the following sections:

SECTION 1: OVERVIEW OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE

Section one articulates the rationale for engaging students, parents and schools in the prevention and awareness of sexual abuse and assault, including national and state statistics, definitions, common misconceptions and a brief discussion on primary prevention strategies.

SECTION 2: IMPLEMENTATION & TEACHING CONSIDERATIONS

Section two provides recommendations for implementing sexual assault and abuse awareness and prevention programs as required by Connecticut General Statute Sec. 17a-101q.

SECTION 3: SEXUAL ASSAULT & ABUSE AWARENESS & PREVENTION CURRICULUM FRAMEWORK

Section three provides a framework to assist school districts in identifying or writing developmentally- and age-appropriate curricula and other educational materials designed for students in grades kindergarten to 12. This framework supplements the Connecticut State Department of Education’s Guidelines for the Sexual Health Education Component of Comprehensive Health Education.

SECTION 4: POLICY GUIDANCE

Section four provides policy recommendations for receiving sexual abuse and assault disclosures and reporting procedures.

SECTION 5: RECOMMENDED RESOURCES

This section contains national and state resources that may be used for professional development, curriculum and policy development, and programs and services.

SECTION 1:

AN OVERVIEW OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE

RATIONALE

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has identified sexual violence as an important public health problem that affects the lives of millions of people in the United States. They state, "These forms of violence can lead to serious short- and long-term consequences including physical injury, poor mental health, and chronic physical health problems. For some persons, violence victimization results in hospitalization, disability, or death. Furthermore, previous research indicates that victimization as a child or adolescent increases the likelihood that victimization will recur in adulthood. These forms of violence frequently are experienced at an early age because a majority of victims experienced their first victimization before age 25 years, with a substantial proportion experiencing victimization in childhood or adolescence."¹

Ending sexual violence in our society requires a systemic response. No one group or person can prevent sexual violence. The message that sexual violence will not be tolerated must come in many forms from many voices. It is a problem that affects both girls and boys and is overwhelmingly perpetrated by someone the victim knows and trusts.² In Connecticut, 14% of residents report that they have personally experienced childhood sexual assault.³ Nearly one in five girls and one in fourteen boys has been a victim of sexual abuse in our state⁴ and one in every seven of those victims was under the age of six.⁵ 44% of victims of rape are under 18 years old.⁶ In addition, over 13% of college women in Connecticut indicate that they have been forced to have sex in a dating situation.⁷ According to the Connecticut School Health Survey, 15.5% of high school females 7.5% of high school males have been forced to have sex with someone.⁸

The Connecticut State Department of Public Health reports that six in ten sexual assault victims develop psychological issues including depression and post-traumatic stress disorder.⁹ In their Healthy Connecticut 2020 State Health Improvement Plan, they have identified strategies to reduce the incidence of sexual violence in Connecticut. The guidance in this document is aligned with these strategies.

CONNECTICUT DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH STRATEGIES TO REDUCE INCIDENCE OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE IN CONNECTICUT

- Advocate for sexual assault educator training to build capacity for prevention efforts.
- Disseminate best practices and effective primary prevention strategies of sexual violence.
- Advocate for the implementation of school-based programs to reduce violence and promote healthy relationships for middle and high school-aged youth.

DEFINITION OF TERMS

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

A multi-layered oppression that occurs at the societal and individual level and is connected to and influenced by other forms of oppression, in particular, sexism, racism, and heterosexism. On the societal level, it is the preponderance of attitudes, actions, social norms that perpetuate and sustain environments and behaviors that promote a cultural tolerance, acceptance, and denial of sexual assault and abuse. On an individual level, sexual violence is a wide range of sexual acts and behaviors that are unwanted, coerced, committed without consent, or forced either by physical means or through threats.¹⁰

SEXUAL ASSAULT

Sexual assault can be defined as any type of sexual contact or behavior that occurs by force or without consent of the recipient of the unwanted sexual activity. Falling under the definition of sexual assault is sexual activity such as forced sexual intercourse, forcible sodomy, child molestation, incest, fondling, and attempted rape. It includes sexual acts against people who are unable to consent either due to age or lack of capacity.¹¹

RAPE

Rape is defined as the penetration, no matter how slight, of the vagina or anus with any body part or object, or oral penetration by a sex organ of another person, without the consent of the victim.¹²

VICTIM / SURVIVOR

The terms victim and survivor are often used interchangeably. Law enforcement and those that collect statistics often use the term victim when describing someone who has experienced sexual violence. Therefore you will often see this term used when referencing statistics or specific crimes. Victims and survivors cope with their experiences in different ways. Some might feel like victims, while others may feel like survivors – both responses are valid. For some, identifying as a survivor honors the work they have done and journey they have made from victim to survivor. In respect for the many emotions one may experience following sexual violence, those who have experienced sexual violence will be referred to as both victims and survivors interchangeably throughout this guidance document.¹³

SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Sexual harassment is unwelcome or unwanted sexual advances. These are not just physical or sexual acts, it also refers to an environment that is created by acceptance of sexual or gender influenced comment. Sexual harassment can occur in workplaces, schools, congregations, camps, community centers, and other places.¹⁴

WHAT IS SEXUAL VIOLENCE?

Misconceptions surrounding sexual violence, victims of sexual violence, and perpetrators of sexual violence have been counterproductive to implementation of truly successful prevention programs. For example, the “stranger danger” myth refers to the erroneous belief that the majority of rape and sexual violence is perpetrated in a violent attack by a stranger. However, consider the following data:

In four out of five rape cases, the victim knows the perpetrator.¹⁵ This is even more relevant in cases of childhood sexual assault where 93% of victims know and trust the perpetrator.¹⁶ Perpetrators are not always adults. Approximately one third of sexual assault perpetrators are under 18 years of age.¹⁷

In addition, one study showed that nine percent of youth age 14-21 reported being the perpetrator of some type of sexual violence in their lifetime, while four percent reported being the perpetrators of attempted or completed rape.¹⁸ Victims are not only women and perpetrators are not only men. In the United States, one in five women and one in seventy-one men will be raped in their lifetime.¹⁹ Learning self-defense and providing women with whistles and instructing them to never walk alone at night are techniques to reduce the risk of only a small proportion of sexual assaults and do not address prevention. Preventing sexual violence requires a shift in focus, from examining what potential victims can do to reduce their risk, to addressing perpetrator behavior and the causes of sexual violence.

A common misconception about sexual violence is that it is mainly about sexual desire. However, it is about power, control, hostility as evidenced by significantly higher incidences of sexual violence in vulnerable populations. It is therefore critical for any successful prevention effort to address attitudes of racism, gender bias, and oppression.

Consider the following data:

- 38.2% of black non-Hispanic women experience at least one act of sexual violence in their lifetime.²⁰
- 1 in 3 multiracial non-Hispanic women will be the victim of rape in her lifetime.²¹
- 49% of American Indian or Native Alaskan women experience sexual violence in their lifetime.²²

PRIMARY PREVENTION

Acknowledging that sexual violence is rooted in power, control, and hostility helps to delineate a clearer path for primary prevention, which is aimed at stopping the assault before it occurs. Primary prevention will require addressing the behaviors that lead people to perpetrate. Hence, the most successful prevention programs focus on challenging attitudes and behaviors that embolden inappropriate interpersonal interactions and instead encourage effective communication skills, empathy, accountability and an understanding of respectful relationships and active consent. It is essential to begin talking about these attitudes and behaviors at an early age in order to build the foundation for respectful relationships.

Sexual violence is not inevitable and it can be prevented. Sexual assault and abuse awareness efforts begin by discussing with students the dynamics of healthy relationships and boundaries including establishing relationships with trusted adults with whom they can confide. Sexual assault and abuse prevention begins by articulating expectations for appropriate interpersonal interactions, thus setting the groundwork to preclude sexual assaults and abuses from occurring in the future. Awareness efforts and prevention efforts are to be clearly distinguished from risk reduction efforts that are focused on the victim's behaviors and can easily turn into victim blaming. A student cannot be expected to protect themselves from sexual assault and abuse. Using non-blaming language when discussing sexual assault and abuse has a direct impact on whether or not a student will come forward and disclose if they are being or have been sexually abused or assaulted.

When discussing sexual violence, language matters. Talking to students about healthy and safe environments builds awareness. Talking about identifying and communicating with trusted adults teaches students where they can go to share their feelings or to ask for help. Alternatively, telling them that certain interactions are "good" or certain interactions are "bad," may make them feel that they are being "bad" when things go wrong or they feel uncomfortable. If students feel that they have been bad, they may also feel like they will get into trouble if they tell, or that it is their fault and not the perpetrator's fault, and as a result may be less likely to tell someone. It is also advisable to avoid telling a student that they “must” tell someone. It can be a very difficult dynamic for a student to decide that a person they love is doing something to them that is wrong. If there have been multiple incidences before they realize or make the connection, they may then feel like they have done something terrible by not telling someone sooner. Some perpetrators insist on silence as their special secret or sometimes as a threat. If a student feels like they have done something bad by not telling someone right away, the cycle of self-blame and secrecy may continue.

Similarly, teaching students about the difference between respectful and disrespectful relationships communicates to them both what to expect and what is expected of them in a relationship or interpersonal interaction which is primary prevention. Alternatively, telling students what not to wear, where they shouldn’t go and who they should avoid, may set one up to feel as if it is their fault if a sexual assault or abuse occurs. It puts the focus on them for preventing the assault. Sexual assault or abuse does not occur because of what someone wore, where they went, who they were with or what they ate or drank. It occurred because someone assaulted or abused them. The fault lies with the perpetrator, not the victim.

SECTION 2:

IMPLEMENTATION & TEACHING CONSIDERATIONS

Per Connecticut General Statute Sec. 17a-101q, each school district is responsible for implementing a sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness program. This programming should be responsive to the needs of each community and include staff training; resources to further staff, parent and student awareness; and age- and developmentally- appropriate educational materials for students.

School administrators, mental health and health providers such as school social workers, school psychologists, school counselors, school nurses, health educators and other professionals as appropriate should be integral in planning the sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness program. Each can serve as a resource, providing counseling and aid in developing and implementing prevention and awareness education. Professionals responsible for the delivery of sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness must receive ongoing training to ensure appropriate preparation including content, skill development and comfort level in addressing these areas. Schools also have the option to access programming taught by experts in the field of sexual violence prevention education. When presenting sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness programming to students, it is a distinct possibility that some students may disclose their experiences in the classroom. Therefore, it is advisable to have trained advocates present to receive these disclosures and to appropriately support and respond. School personnel who will be presenting or present for trainings and discussions may also be triggered. Having trained advocates present will be of benefit for them as well. Section Five of this document offers suggestions for such resources.

Each school district will develop and implement a kindergarten – grade 12 prevention and awareness educational component for students. These lessons should be evidence-informed, developmentally- and age- appropriate, and informed by the required curricular standards and performance indicators outlined in Section Three of these Guidelines. Per Connecticut General Statute Sec. 17a-101q, parents and guardians have the right to opt their child out of lessons pertaining to sexual abuse or sexual assault. Each school district is responsible for having a policy in place regarding opt-out procedures. In addition, it is recommended that parents and guardians have the opportunity to learn about the sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness curriculum and to review materials.

As articulated in the Vermont Sexual Violence Prevention Technical Assistance Resource Guide, there are Nine Principles of Prevention that should guide the development of sexual violence prevention programs. Implementing these principles will provide a solid foundation for influencing positive outcomes in sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness.

NINE PRINCIPLES OF PREVENTION

1. Emphasizes that the program must be comprehensive. A comprehensive program will be more than simply a one lesson snapshot into sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness. Instead, a comprehensive program will incorporate lessons and skill-building into a variety of settings such as student and parent orientation or other opportunities to reinforce the messages.
2. Utilizes varied teaching methods to engage students, including discussion as well as active and skills-based components.
3. Highlights the importance of sufficient instructional time. “A program incorporates the sufficient dosage principle when it implements strategies that provide enough intervention to produce the desired effects and in addition, provides follow-up as necessary to maintain the effects... skills are incorporated with repetition and practice. One-time presentations alone will rarely effect behavioral change.”²⁶
4. Encourages programs to be theory driven. There are multiple theory models that have been shown to positively affect behavior or social change that can be accessed when developing a program for a school or school district. Some of them include: Health Belief Model. It is advisable to take advantage of the knowledge gained from a proven theory driven model when planning and developing a prevention program.²⁷
5. Highlights the importance of fostering positive relationships. An effective program will foster positive relationships between students and adults as well as between students and their peers.
6. Suggests that activities must be appropriately timed, developmentally speaking. For example, our youngest children are not developmentally capable of distinguishing between “safe” and “unsafe” touch.
7. Stresses the importance of socio-culturally relevant programming in order to best reach the target population that is being served. Each school and each district will need to tailor their educational materials to best reach the children that they teach in ways that are relevant and motivating to them.
8. Emphasizes the importance of building in outcome evaluation methodology into the program in order to assess the efficacy of the programming. Good programming will constantly be evaluating and refining to generate the best outcomes for their children.
9. Underscores the significance of well-trained staff to deliver the prevention programming.

Below are teaching considerations and practical tips for delivering sexual assault and sexual abuse awareness and prevention.

TEACHING CONSIDERATIONS

- Avoid asking young children to identify “good” or “bad” touch, “safe” or “unsafe” touch or “appropriate” or “inappropriate” touch as they may not be able to do so developmentally.
- Avoid placing responsibility on children to protect themselves by referring to “gut feelings” or “instincts” about sexual abuse. The experience of childhood trauma can significantly affect brain development and the subsequent emotional responses of children. Emotional responses of traumatized children may be marked by dissociation/numbing or hyper-arousal.²⁸
- Avoid using blaming language like “don’t let anyone hurt you” because it can make children who have been victimized feel like they have done something wrong and they may not seek help.
- Avoid saying that children “must” or “should” or “have to” tell someone if they think something is wrong. Instead use empowering language like you “can” ask for help. The distinction is important to avoid putting the burden of disclosure on children.
- During discussions that might bring up cultural differences, emphasize that these differences should not only be tolerated, but also respected.
- Remember that for some children a trustworthy adult may not be their parent or family member.
- Use non-blaming language to keep the door open for youth to ask for help or disclose regardless of whether they are a victim, witness / bystander or perpetrator.
- Focus should be on perpetrator prevention and bystander intervention.
- Do not focus solely on safety techniques for young women (example: don’t walk at night alone, don’t put yourself in a risky situation) as this can lead to victim blaming.
- Always use the anatomically correct names for body parts.

These considerations are adapted from Vermont’s Sexual Violence Prevention Technical Assistance Resource Guide.

COLLABORATIVE APPROACH

Though schools, teachers and administrators cannot do this work alone, they are poised to play a critical role in primary prevention of sexual violence. By embracing this opportunity to talk with students about appropriate interactions, communications skills, empathy, accountability it provides a clear understanding of respectful interpersonal relationships and active consent. Through this effort, they will also help raise awareness in children who may be at risk for or experiencing sexual violence. To make a broader impact it is recommended that sexual assault and abuse awareness and prevention be aligned with other district and school requirements and initiatives including Title IX; School Climate Plans; Whole School, Whole Community, Whole Child; and the Guidelines for the Sexual Health Education Component of Comprehensive Health Education.

It is essential to incorporate a tiered approach when addressing the social, emotional, behavioral, mental and physical health needs of students. This tiered approach ensures that prevention education is in place for all students with more intensive interventions available as needed. To best meet the needs of all students, this approach must be a coordinated and integrated system of supports and include access to appropriate services and providers such as mental health and health providers including school social workers, school psychologists, school counselors, and school nurses. An example of a tiered intervention can be found in SDE's Topical Brief 3 Scientific Research-Based Interventions: Addressing the Needs of the Whole Child. In addition, in order to establish a safe and secure educational environment, schools need to ensure that their school safety and emergency response systems are reviewed regularly and updated to address current needs. Codes of conduct delineating behavior/social standards and expectations, including strict prohibitions regarding bullying, harassment and sexual violence, should be clear, concise and consistently enforced in the school and classroom environments. Finally, as in all other areas, schools should be engaging in a two-way communication with families and communities in supporting the development and maintenance of these social, emotional, and physical health skills.

These programs and best practices can help children to recognize that it is okay to ask for help and that there are people who care and are available to help them if they choose to seek assistance. In addition, this programming can assure that school professionals, staff and administrators are trained to respond appropriately to disclosures of sexual assault and abuse. Paired with ongoing societal prevention and awareness efforts on the national, state and local levels it is possible to end sexual violence.

ASSISTANCE WITH DEVELOPING DISTRICT PLAN

There are numerous resources available to aid schools in creating and implementing a sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness plan. Connecticut Alliance to End Sexual Violence has member programs statewide available to assist school districts in planning and implementation as well as offering in-school programming. The Connecticut Regional Educational Service Centers are prepared to partner with member school districts to assist with curriculum development and the planning and coordinating of programs and services. The Department of Children and Families offers courses through their Workforce Development Academy on mandated reporting for school employees and information about Reporting Child Abuse and Neglect. Additionally, technical assistance is available for school personnel including administrators, school mental health and health (nurses) providers, health educators and Title IX coordinators from the Connecticut State Department of Education.

SECTION 3: SEXUAL ASSAULT & ABUSE PREVENTION & AWARENESS CURRICULUM FRAMEWORK

Connecticut General Statute (C.G.S) 17a-101q requires that age-appropriate educational materials be designed for students “in grades kindergarten to twelve, inclusive, regarding child sexual abuse and assault awareness and prevention that may include, but not be limited to, (a) the skills to recognize (i) child sexual abuse and assault, (ii) boundary violations and unwanted forms of touching and contact, and (iii) ways offenders groom or desensitize victims, and (b) strategies to (i) promote disclosure, (ii) reduce self-blame, and (iii) mobilize bystanders .”

This section provides a curriculum framework to assist school districts in developing effective, comprehensive and culturally competent sexual assault and abuse prevention and awareness educational materials for students in grades kindergarten through twelve. This Framework is in alignment with and formatted to supplement the Connecticut State Department of Education’s Guidelines for the Sexual Health Education Component of Comprehensive Health Education. In addition, components of this Framework were informed by the Vermont Sexual Violence Prevention Technical Assistance Resource Guide.

This Curriculum Framework is organized into the following grade clusters: Kindergarten; Grades 1-4; Grades 5-8; and Grades 9-12. Within each grade cluster, there is a chart listing Connecticut Sexual Health Education Standards, sexual assault and abuse prevention education and awareness standards, and performance indicators defining what students should know and be able to do by specific grade levels. While not required, it is encouraged whenever possible to include developmentally-appropriate instruction at the pre-kindergarten level. It is the responsibility of local school districts to determine the needs of their student population and to select appropriate educational materials. Parents or legal guardians may opt their child out of such instruction through a written notification to the local or regional board of education.

SECTION 4:

POLICY GUIDANCE

Connecticut General Statute Sec. 17a-101q requires that each school district have a child sexual abuse and assault response policy and reporting procedure that includes the following:

“A uniform child sexual abuse and assault response policy and reporting procedure that may include, but not be limited to, (a) actions that child victims of sexual abuse and assault may take to obtain assistance, (b) intervention and counseling options for child victims of sexual abuse and assault, (c) access to educational resources to enable child victims of sexual abuse and assault to succeed in school, and (d) uniform procedures for reporting instances of child sexual abuse and assault to school staff members” (Sec. 17a-101q).

Each district is responsible for developing policies that respond to state law and meet the needs of their community. It is recommended that local boards of education and school administrators engage key stakeholders when developing and updating their policies related to sexual abuse and sexual assault. Stakeholders may include district attorneys, school health and mental professionals, health educators, parents and other key representatives as appropriate. There are numerous resources to assist with policy development and technical assistance including the Connecticut Association of Boards of Education. In addition, there are resources listed in Section Five of this document that may be helpful in informing policy development.

Effective written policies and procedures must follow mandated reporting laws for suspected child abuse and neglect which can be found in Sections 17a-101 through 17a-103a inclusive of the Connecticut General Statutes. These statutes define roles and responsibilities of staff, teachers, parents and students with regard to procedures for reporting suspected or confirmed sexual assault or abuse. In addition, response procedures maintain confidentiality, and provide support for the victim whether they are a student or adult, support for the perpetrator whether they are a student or adult, and support for both the victim or perpetrator re-entry into the school setting.

Best practice policies also include information regarding training on policies, practices and procedures including but not limited to: DCF mandated reporting, school district policies, Minimal Facts, Connecticut Code of Professional Responsibility for Teachers and Connecticut Code of Professional Responsibility for Administrators. Codes of conduct delineating behavior/social standards and expectations, including strict prohibitions regarding bullying, harassment and sexual violence, should be clear, concise and consistently enforced in the school and classroom environments. Policies and procedures must be accessible to the school community including staff, teachers, students, parents and families. Recommendations to increase accessibility include inserting policies in the faculty and student handbooks and to incorporate policy information into classroom instruction.

In addition, policy language, procedures and practices should align with other requirements and best practices including Title IX; School Climate Plans; Whole School, Whole Community, Whole Child; and the Guidelines for the Sexual Health Education Component of Comprehensive Health Education. Districts should also consider strategies to access state and local resources for victims as well as resources to support planning for victim and/or perpetrator re-entry into school.

SECTION 5:

The following resources were identified and recommended by a collaborative committee of community-based organizations, local school districts and state agencies.
